Latest Developments

Dozens of civilians were left dead and several others wounded after the Syrian government forces hit AlMzeirib town, in Daraa's western outskirts, south of Syria, with four air strikes at noontime Saturday.

Most of the victims remain unidentified as their bodies have gone mutilated in the horrendous massacre. AGPS managed to obtain live snapshots from the scene. However the group abstains from releasing the pictures due to the terrifically disfigured nature of the dead bodies.

AlMzeirib, home to 1,700 Palestinian families, has been ceaselessly targeted by the Syrian regime army. At the same time, bloody hostilities between the government troops and the opposition outfits have reached a zenith in the area.

Meanwhile, an anti-government onslaught on Daraa's commercial institute, sheltering Palestinian and Syrian families displaced from Daraa Camp, left a number of civilians wounded, including three children—

Bahaa Samer, Sam AlSa'id, and Ahmed Kasem. Thick smoke stemmed from the area as a 40,000-liter fuel tank was hit in the offensive.

Meanwhile, ISIS militias ordered civilians in AlShuhadaa Strip, in Yarmouk, to leave their homes under the security pretext.

The crackdown comes just a few days after ISIS ordered 50 families living near flashpoints with Yalda town to evacuate their homes under the same pretext.

Reporting from the area, AGPS news correspondent said ISIS has tightened the noose around civilians' neck and stepped up abrupt search campaigns in the hunt for opposition affiliates.

In another development, the Swedish Migration Agency turned down the appeals of a Palestinian family from Syria to reunite with their 15-year-old son in Sweden.

The son was granted the Swedish citizenship following a two-year stay in Sweden.

The family said they were shocked by the ban, issued by the Swedish authorities on claims that the son earned the Swedish nationality and has no longer the right to family reunification.

The family appealed, in letters emailed to AGPS, to the concerned human rights institutions to urgently step in and work on reuniting them with their son.

Along the same line, Palestinian refugees from Syria in Saudi Arabia have sounded the alarm over the mistreatment they have been subjected to after the Saudi authorities prevented them of their basic rights, including the right to a visa, education, and free medical care.

A Palestinian family who fled war-torn Syria said they entered Saudi Arabia as pilgrims to perform Umrah (minor pilgrimage). The visa expired one month later and the family was ordered to leave Saudi Arabia after local authorities refused to renew their visas.

“The Saudi authorities also prevented our children from enrolling at local schools and denied us access to the labor market on account that we overstayed our visas,” the family stated.

The father added that they have been shorn of the right to free medical treatment.

“We’ve seen it all in Saudi clinics. When my wife delivered our newborn we’d been forced to pay all treatment fees,” he said.

Another family said they have spent sleepless nights after their relative was buried two months following his death because they do not have visas. “Animals have more rights than we do,” stated the family.
