Latest Developments

Reporting from western Damascus Suburbs, AGPS correspondent said the Syrian regime fighter aircrafts targeted on Friday evening the environs of Khan Al-Shih Camp for Palestinian refugees with four explosive barrels. Overnight raids on Thursday targeted Khan Al-Shih's surrounding ranches with 15 explosive barrels, sparking a state of terror among children and women.

The onslaughts come at a time when Syrian regime troops have sealed off all accessroads to the metropolis for 35 consecutive days, resulting in an acute shortage in basic foodstuff, relief items, and toddler milk. Alarms have, meanwhile, been sounded over an imminent humanitarian crisis awaiting over 12,000 blockaded civilians around the corner.

A couple of weeks ago, the Syrian government forces seized an air defense base located in western Zakia town, in Damascus outskirts. In early October, they also held sway over the nearby Dierkhabiya town. Attempts have, meanwhile, been underway by the regime forces to snatch the remaining territory.

In another development, Syrian rebels in northern Syria cut the government's only supply route along the Ithriyah-Khanasser Road following violent clashes with the pro-regime militias.

Residents of Al-Neirab Camp voiced their deep concern over a looming socio-economic crisis and a swift upsurge in food prices due to the acute dearth in fuel reserves and basic food items.

Being adjacent to the strategic Al-Neirab Military Airport, Al-Neirab Camp has been the permanent target of deadly offensives by the different warring parties in embattled Syria.

The Ithriyah-Khanasser Road is the government's main supply line to Aleppo and Al-Neirab. It serves as a junction connecting the government-led territories in Aleppo to Hama, Homs, and Damascus provinces.

In another development, the Syrian regime forces kidnapped the Palestinian relief activist Sa'id Al-Shehabi, from Nour Association for Relief and Development. Sa'id, also a coordinator for the Yarmouk Relief Campaign, was kidnapped a couple of days ago while taking part in preparations for a relief convoy slated to be dispatched to Damascus southern corners.

AGPS documented the incarceration of over 1,100 Palestinian refugees in Syrian regime lock-ups, most of whom have had unknown fates.

Meanwhile, an awareness campaign, organized by the Yarmouk refugee youth and Babilla youth activists in partnership with Dr. Abu Omar and the volunteer surgical staff members at the Civil Hospital, kicked off in Palestinian refugee schools in the southern region.

The campaign warned of the propagation of lice infections and jaundice and raised awareness about good hygiene habits. Among 254 sampled patients 128 cases caught lice infections and 15 others caught scabies. Medics said efforts have been ongoing to examine a larger number of children and provide them with the appropriate cure.

Thousands of Palestinian refugees were forced out of their homes after ISIS militias took hold of the camp in April 2015 with the help of Nusra Front outfits. The Syrian regime squads have also kept a tight rein on the camp, blocking civilians exit from/entry into the area and cutting off power and water supplies to the camp.
