Two infants had died over the past few days in the camp as a result of the siege imposed by the Syrian regime and its affiliated factions since mid-2015.

The Action Group added that those who died during October, were distributed across Syria as follows: 3 refugees died in Deraa, 3 in Damascus, 3 people's locations of death are unknown, 2 refugees in Deir ez-Zour and one person died in the suburbs of Damascus.

According to AGPS, the number of Palestinian refugees who have died because of the ongoing war in Syria has reached 3607 victims.

In another context, clashes broke out between the Khaled battalion, an armed group affiliated to ISIS, and the armed Syrian opposition groups in the western Yarmouk Basin, which includes camps and Palestinian gatherings in the south of Syria.

The Action Group's reporter said that the opposition groups bombarded the Yarmouk Basin at night with rocket launchers. The region is facing a state of tension and alertness, in anticipation of attacks by ISIS.

In the meantime, the remaining Palestinian refugees in the region are living in extremely harsh humanitarian conditions due to the ongoing clashes and fighting, as well as the lack of financial resources, the widespread of unemployment, the interruption of aid and their poor health conditions.

In south Damascus, 250 students from Yarmouk camp were allowed to enter Yelda to continue their education. According to our reporter, ISIS banned the students from carrying their school supplies, including stationery, books and pens.

Our correspondent added that the number of students who entered are only a quarter of the total number of students in the camp, which are approximately 1100 students. Several civilians from the areas of Yarmouk camp, Al-Hajar Al-Aswad, Al-Tadamon and Al-Qadam, were able to enter Yelda alongside the students, after the approval of ISIS and the armed opposition factions.
