AGPS

AGPS has sent a letter to the Turkish authority in Ankara and the Turkish embassy in London condemning the frequent attacks that Palestinian refugees were subjected at the Syrian-Turkish borders. The violations against Palestinian refugees fleeing Syria committed by Turkish borders guards in more than one incident. Targeting the refugees by gunshots causing many deaths, and severe beating to the point of shattering ribs and teeth causing serious wounds; then get them back to Syria which are considered a violation of the international law and Universal declaration of Human Rights, AGPS said.

AGPS demanded the Turkish government to investigate the violations and allow Palestinian refugees from Syria to enter the country without visa requirements similar to their counterparts of Syrian refugees. In addition, AGPS enclosed a detailed report about the situation of Palestinians from Syria, and their circumstances in the Diaspora countries. In its turn, AGPS called the human rights organizations to put more pressure on countries and address governments where Palestinians are subjected to violations.

VICTIMS

Udai Kadoura, Palestinian refugee from Yarmouk camp, has been tortured to death. Knowing that Kadoura was an activist volunteer in the Charity Association for the Relief of Palestinian People which is affiliated to Al-Jihad Al-Islami movement. It is worth mentioning that the toll of Palestinians torturing death reached 436.

RECENT UPDATES

AGPS announced new statistics of Palestinian women who have been killed during the Syrian war. The announcement coincides with International Woman Day in 8 March. In the details, AGPS revealed that 214 women killed due to bombings and 62 under the siege and shortage in the medical care in Yarmouk camp, whereas 62 women had been targeted by snipers and 21 shot dead. Explosions resulted in 37 victims and 26 drowned in the sea as they tried to cross to the European side, while 5 women were executed in the field and 34 tortured to death. the last 19 women died owing to different reasons like burning, suicide, suffocation or firing by Israelis forces when Palestinian refugees protested at the border with Golan in 5/6/2011.

In the meantime, relatives of the women detainees in the Syrian regime's prisons expressed their anger against the regime and the international institutions, PLO and Palestinian factions because of the ignorance of the issue. These feelings were expressed in the letter received by AGPS from the families who demanded the human rights organisations to intervene in order to release all women from the infamous Syrian prisons; and raising the issue in every domestic and international occasions.

According to testimonies by released women, the Syrian security carries out various range of torture types on women detainees, from electrocution to rape by officers and soldiers. AGPS statistics indicates that Syrian forces have arrested 1061 Palestinian women, 75 are in enforced disappearance and no information about their fate. AGPS asserts that the real number is more than the documented one, but there are no official figures neither from Palestinian authority nor Syrian government.

In a different context, local sources in Yarmouk camp said that civilians were subjected to sniper shots over the past two days in Al-Uroba street, Al-Basil swimming pool and the 30th street. The accident came in the wake of the clashes between Al-Nusra fighters and other opposition groups in Yalda. The source added that an elderly man from Yarmouk camp and other two children girls were injured by snipers.

In the meantime, activists and the General Medical Commission in south Damascus called for getting the people in the critical condition out of the area to have a proper therapy. They appealed for the 4-year-old girl, Malak Abu Omar, to be allowed to reach the hospital in the capital after she had been seriously wounded by snipers.

On the other hand, ISIS has released Basil Ayoub, the head of Al-Aqsa Institution, and Abu Abdelelah, the head of the Charity of Yarmouk Camp Charity for Relief and Development.

AGPS received information of missing of Palestinian refugee, Fadi Essat, who lives in Hanover in Germany. The Palestinian refugee who fled Khan Esheih camp in Syria to Europe was missed two weeks ago. Essat's family appealed all entities and Human Rights organisations in Germany to exert efforts to search for him.

Turning to Turkey, FIDDER institution distributed food packages to Palestinian refugees in Ankara. The distribution is part of the campaign titled "Relief Them" and the aim of the campaign is assisting the Palestinian families in Turkey, according to officials from FIDDER. It is worth noting that FIDDER had carried out several relief projects for Palestinians from Syria; and it exerted efforts in order to settle the legal status of Palestinians in Turkey.
