Military service in Syria is mandatory for Palestinian refugees in Syria, this forced many youngsters who refuse to participate in military service to flee the country.

The AGPS' correspondent reported the arrest of the Palestinian teacher "Firas Al-Ramli", Khan Eshieh camp resident. Al-Ramli was arrested by the soldiers of the Al-Qutayfa security checkpoint on his way to work. His family could get confirmation about him after seven days of searching.

The "Turkish Organisation in solidarity with Palestine FIDDER" has announced starting the census of Palestinian refugees displaced from Syria and Iraq to Turkey, which was announced earlier, to be given later on to the Turkish government, in order to settle the legal status and grant them official residence permits.

This procedure is expected to entitle the Palestinian refugees to job opportunities and ease of movement within the country.

FIDDER assured that it opened its doors yesterday to receive Palestinian refugees from Syria and Iraq to Turkey, to direct registration, in cooperation with the Palestinian embassy in Turkey and under the supervision of Deputy Prime Minister "Dr. Mohammad Murtaza Yatch".

It is noteworthy that, according to unofficial statistics, an approximate census of Palestinian-Syrian refugees in Turkey indicate that they count 6,000-8,000 refugees in Istanbul and the provinces of central and southern Turkey, this was mentioned in the AGPS' report: "The Palestinians of Syria's bloody diary and screaming inaudible" issued in August 2015.

STATISTICS

Monitoring and documentation team in the AGPS, revealed that, at least 282 Palestinian refugees are still missing since the start of the war in Syria, including 37 females, the team said that more than half of the abductees are from the Yarmouk camp.

Activists accused many of the pro-regime groups of carrying out kidnapping and arrest acts, either through pretending that the person is wanted by Syrian security, to be killed later, or in order to negotiate directly with his family and request ransoms for his release.

In addition to the abductees issue, testimonies of some released prisoners assured that, many abductees were seen in the Syrian regime's prisons.

For example, one of the released prisoners from the Syrian jails, refused to uncover his identity, assured seeing the Palestinian boy "Omar Mohammed Siam" 16-years Yarmouk camp boy, in the regime's jail, Siam had been abducted since the date of 11.21.2012 and it turned out that he was detained in a Syrian security branches in Damascus.

The director of the Middle East and North Africa program of Amnesty International's Philip Luther, confirmed earlier that "the enforced disappearance is part of a deliberate and brutal crackdown by the Syrian government, since it falls within the scope of its validity in order to put an end to this explicit suffering of tens of thousands of people, and can do so by instructing its security forces to stop it, and inform families the whereabouts of their sons and their own destiny, and immediately and unconditionally release all detainees who are imprisoned for exercising their rights in a peaceful manner.
